Cabin Drop-In – It's Nuts!

On October 17 and 24, the Cincinnati Nature Center will host "A Hard Nut to Crack", a program focusing on the history of local nuts, the "tree rat tax", what nuts have to do with pigs, and the importance of these nuts to the early settlers. Crack into walnuts and hickory nuts while learning about the interesting heritage of our nutty friends. This family event will be held at CNC's Rowe Woods Abner Hollow Cabin.

Jason Neumann, CNC Experiential Educator, states "this event is a very educational event and it is fun for the whole family. Anyone who is interested in learning more about the history of Ohio's early settler's should come out and visit us".

The Cincinnati Nature Center is a great place to visit during the fall season. Hike through over 16 miles of trails through colorful trees, grassy fields, and beautiful ponds during this marvelous fall season. Not only do you get to experience the wonders of the fall colors, but it is fantastic exercise for everyone in your family. Join us as we explore nature's bounty.
